FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SWR INSTITUTE TO HOLD FALL TECHNICAL MEETING SEPT. 21-23 IN BALTIMORE

Kansas City, MO: July 22, 2008 — Sealant, Waterproofing & Restoration Institute (SWR Institute) is preparing to host its Fall Technical Meeting September 21-23, 2008, at the Hyatt Regency Baltimore on the Inner Harbor in Baltimore, MD. The conference theme, “A Game Plan for Major League Success,” will be put into action as attendees of the three-day meeting experience new trends in the sealant, waterproofing and restoration industry while getting the opportunity to network with industry peers.

Attendees include contractors, manufacturers, architects, specifiers, project engineers and commercial property managers/owners. This year’s program includes presentations on terra cotta basics, new generation air barriers, green building and VOC standards and much more. Educational sessions also include project showcases, general sessions and a technical clearinghouse that is an interactive discussion format that features a free-flowing dialogue. This meeting is open to the general public.

SWR Institute is an international trade association that represents the commercial sealant, waterproofing and restoration construction industry. With over 275 member companies, SWR Institute’s membership represents some of the most experienced and qualified contractors, manufacturers and design professionals in the industry. Through educational programs and publications, SWR Institute members promote industry-wide standards of application and products.
